Vini Rossi/ Red Wines

PIEMONTE

Barbera & Dolcetto

Barbera is an every-day affordable stunner.

The wine, while very dark in color, is actually quite light in taste. Barbera has flavors of cherries, strawberries and raspberries, and when young can have intense aromas of blackberries as well.

Dolcetto is an early-ripening grape and like many similar varieties produces wines that are soft, fruity and acidic with mild tannins. Dolcettos are relatively inexpensive, food-friendly and reliable wines that are, like the people that produce them, plain-spoken and unassuming.

Pinot Nero & Nebbiolo

Nebbiolo and Pinot Noir are both appreciated by wine lovers for the specific qualities they can give their wines. Powerful, robust and full bodied the Nebbiolo, refined and elegant the Pinot Noir, wines produced with these two varieties are characterized by some common qualities, however being distant expressions.

Barbaresco

Also known as “the QUEEN of wines” Barbaresco is allowed to age a year less than Barolo. The biggest difference between the two wines is that the tannins of Barbaresco tend to soften quicker – making the wines more approachable when young.

Barolo

Also known as “the KING of wines” Barolo is arguably Italy’s greatest red wine. It is produced from 100-percent Nebbiolo grapes grown on the hills surrounding the town of Barolo. Barolo must have a minimum of 12.5-percent alcohol and be aged a minimum of three years, with two of those years in either oak or chestnut casks.

Montalcino

Brunello is a strong full bodied complex dry red wine from the area around Montalcino in South Tuscany.

Brunello wine is made from 100% Sangiovese Grosso and has a bright garnet color.

Rosso di Montalcino (Baby Brunello) is a younger, more approachable version of Brunello, meant to be enjoyed young.

Veneto

Primarily Corvina along with Rondinella and Molinara, are used to produce Amarone. But the difference between the two wines is usually striking; where Valpolicella is a medium-weight wine meant for consumption with lighter fare with in its first 3-5 years, Amarone is a much more robust wine that is perfect paired with big dishes and even cheese.

Dessert Wines

Dessert wines serve beautifully alongside a well-made dessert, or they stand well alone at the end of a meal. These high-sugar, high alcohol wines are tremendously popular, even among non-wine drinkers. Many types of dessert wines exist from around the world, each with different flavor characteristics and price ranges.

Vin Santo

Vin santo (Holy Wine) is a late-harvest wine from Italy, generally Tuscany. It’s usually made from white grapes, namely Trebbiano or Malvasia, that are semi-dried before being pressed and fermented; then the wines are stored in small barrels for up to 10 years, usually in attics which turn hot and cold with the seasons. Vin Santo is traditionally served with a piece of biscotti for “dunking”. This act is known to bring out the nutty characters out of the wine.
